About the Reserve

Attenborough Nature Reserve was established in 1966 and opened by Sir David Attenborough. The reserve is best known for its birds and is an important site for winter wildfowl.

Attenborough often holds a high proportion of the county's shoveler and diving ducks, with larger numbers of mallard, teal, and wigeon. Scarcer wildfowl such as sawbills and sea ducks are recorded regularly.

In the spring and autumn, many migrant birds pass through, and the site attracts a wide range of waders. Attenborough is also host to the beautiful bittern.
